Non-communicable diseases in the Arab world
The tip of the iceberg
In 2010, 77% of the population in the Arab world was under age 40. As young people age, health systems will be saddled with a much larger burden of non-communicable disease than they face today.